WELCOME TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD (Just don't park here)

Marquis called to inform me he is having Long Beach, it will start at Queensferry, and would I scribe. Sure -- but first a couple of questions: 1: "That's a bit North for LB"? Marquis explained it's all Sin-D-Bare's fault -- SDB had asked him to lay a trail in the area especially for LB. Okay, -- might get 5 or 10 people making the trek. Question 2: Where will people park? After the entire neighborhood's famous for its restricted NIMBY no-parking attitude. Apparently some cranky old fart is head of the local Home Owners Association and has some sort of no-parking sign stuck up his ass! What did you say Marquis? You're the head of the local Home Owners Association and you're working on repealing the no-parking ban? Oops -- you must have misheard me -- no further questions.

Since Marquis (and Prince) laid the same trail for L.A. a few weeks earlier, I volunteered for the beercheck. At the L.A. hash, there was no beer check and we all found this a major concern in his trail design-- plus it got me out of redoing the f^%king trail and encountering poison oak again. When I pulled up SID and Hozer were already parked about a block from the intended start. They had the last parking spaces for about 1/4 mile. Last Train arrived with the beer and was shown a "locals only" place to park by the start; which also is where the down downs would take place.

The usual suspects began arriving looking for parking and checking in with Alouette. Soon the early bird mountain bikers began leaving and parking became plentiful. Jesus Christ Superscar began handing out flyers for his Hooligan Bastard Party (h'mm, me' thinks PMS and I are the only Hooligans currently in the LB Hash), plus several others pimping Founder's Ball to be held February 9th. Ballots were handed out for the upcoming elections and ballot box stuffing began. When it was discovered the beer wagon was near the start, everybody began gravitating towards Point A. Many LB Hashers had their run bags expecting an A to B event. After much milling around Marquis announced it would be an A to A experience, and a place was found for bags. Oedipussy and B & B arrived in a blatant display of elitism showing off their shirts from the previous weekends 50 miler in Avalon. BFD -- who hasn't done one of those?

Marquis gave usual instructions -- no hills, no dogs, and no poison oak, and the Eagle trail would be twice as long as the Turkey trail. However the run was delayed, as the hare's flour appeared to have been misplaced. We all thought --no problem, most likely prelayed anyway. Flour was finally located -- apparently Rats Ass was planning a pizza party later and needed supplies -- and the hare departed. While waiting for the pack to leave, I spotted Spankee with her mom. Wow, she's making her mom do this trail again? Whaleboner showed up with hand pick and magnifying glass -- hoping maybe another skull will be found on trail? Fungus approached asking if it .

Was okay if he ran 180 degrees from the start direction. No problem – you’ll do it anyway; and take Dr. Mikey with you for company. Screw Cap asked how many beerchecks would there be on trail. One – Eagles only. If looks could kill. I asked Fruit if Marquis can get permission to lay LB trail this far North, can my ‘LB Haring banned-for-life stipulation’ be lifted? “Never” - he responded. The pack was off. Trail ran down hill to the T-E split. The smart bet was the turkey trail, however Blojack, Retracted, Kenny-G, Sum Dum, Low Beams, and many others looking for fun in the woods, took the eagle. Hope they enjoy P.O.. A brief note about the eagle trail. Apparently the gas company has to do a maintenance check every 10 years on their gas lines. Marquis discovered freshly made marks made by gas company employees and converted their hard work into trail. Now you know the rest of the story. At this point I drove off to man the beer check, which would be about 2 miles of trail hashing, or 60 minutes by the clock, from the start. Beer check was on Old Ranch Road. Lots of horses and dogs tucked away just off of Sunset Blvd. The trail first contoured around West Sullivan Ridge and into the canyon, up to East Sullivan Ridge (above the old Nazi Village). It then came down the Peacock Trail and to the beer-check. Marquis arrived about 30 minutes after leaving the start and popped a beer. Out of nowhere Howdy Do Me blasted in to everyone’s surprise and Snared the Hare, and then popped a brew. At first Howdy asked if there was any light beer – No, just Newcastle Brown. ‘Damn’, he complained. Okay LB, next time it’s PBR for all. The hare gulped his beer and decided time to leave. Soon others arrived – about 2 dozen plus had done the eagle trail. Lots of scrapped hands and knees were attended to, beer consumed, and stories swapped. Then one by one they departed for the end. I was about to fold up the beer check when Retracted came panting in. First thing he asked was whether Spankee had arrived. Yup, about 30 minutes ago I replied. Really, No Way, he exclaimed? Well, I responded, actually it was maybe only 20 minutes ago, but definitely ahead of you big boy. Retracted relaxed at that point. After Retracted came SID, Passing Wind, He’s So Sweet, Never Cums, and a handful of others. After being told no body else on trail, I packed up and started to leave and of course a few more hashers cum in. Cockwork sauntered in and requested a beer and a ride back to the end.

No problem. When we arrived I discovered Low Beams was still out on trail but arrived just before the munchies were put out. Down downs began and it was noticed that Marquis had brought his own On On On. A standard issue Roach Coach was parked near the start/end with delightful smells of pig skins and lard drifting in the breeze. Perfect! Pinky was yelling for hashers to abandon the roach coach in favor of the circle – good luck fearless leader. Finally enough hashers gathered around to begin. Marquis was given the usual hare hazing followed by several other reasons for him to drink a beer including a 10th Hare Patch. Among the newbies were Jewels, Jean, and Austin (a fair fast hasher). Visitors included Darth Vader, Waddling Wanker, Never Cums, Retracted, Spankee & Mom. HASHSHIT was awarded to Moaning Fucker. MF apparently had a difficult time putting together that $A + B = C$. Blojak announced he had poison oak on his dick. We tClam announced she had poison oak on her face. Gee –how did the p.o. on WC’s face get there? Where’s Dr.Mikey to explain? Anyway, MF gladly drank her down down, we all adjourned to the roach coach for beans and rice. No one got a parking ticket, no one got towed, and only one neighbor came out to investigate – which turned out to be a friend of Marquis. He just shook his head and went back inside. Head? Who said head? For all those I did not mention I apologize. Gotta attend more LB hashes – lots of fun.

Respectfully submitted:
Darth Vader

#702 THIS DATE IN HASH HISTORY

Run # 702 Date: 1/25/1998 (10 years ago)
 Place: Long Beach
 Hares: 8 YELLOW SNOW & BLOW UP DOLL
 Miles: 6 Attendance: 90

Run # 702 celebrated both Super Bowl Sunday and the birthdays of hares 8 YELLOW SNOW and BLOW UP DOLL. The hares left at the traditional time for Super Bowl Sunday – 11:18 AM. We ran through some residential neighborhoods and soon reached Beer Check # 1 in El Dorado Park. We passed the LBH3 memorial trees and paid tribute to our fallen hashers. Trail proceeded through a tunnel under the freeway to BC # 2, and then down more residential streets and through a shopping center. Beer Check # 3 was in a small bar. We then ran through CSULB, where most of the pack lost trail. We eventually reached the On-In where GM's SCOOTER and WILD BILL presided at down-downs. Highlights were the naming of HOLD THE PICKLE and the awarding of the Hashit to FLOUNCER. Then it was on to 8 and BUD's house for the Super Bowl festivities. There was much food and drink, and there were television sets everywhere so all could watch the game. Many hashers watched from the jacuzzi.
